Yesterday arrived a Mail from Holland, and another from France.

Y the Dutch Mail we have the following Advices from Dantzick, relating to the Demise of the late Duke of Courland, and the Affair of the Succession, which becomes every Day more important.

The Duke Ferdinand of Courland, who us'd almost every Day, either to walk on Foot, or to take the Air in his Coach, having not been seen abroad for a good while, it was not long before he was suppos'd to be out of Order. 'Tis conjectur'd, that the Court of Dresden very well knew how it was with him; because three Saxon Officers had been here for several Months, who often frequented the Duke's Court. We had heard nothing at all here of the Duke's Indisposition, till the 24th of April, (O. S.) at Nine o'Clock in the Forenoon, when the Secretary of the Saxon Ministry in this City went to the Magistrates and told them, by Order of the Dukes, That the Duke her Husband departed this Life the Day before; after which he went and notify'd the same to all the Foreign Ministers. Upon this Occasion, those of Sweden and Prussia went to the Chief Burgomaster, and requested, That the late Duke's Effects might be seal'd up with the Seal of the Council and theirs; which they represented as the only Means to secure the Regency from any Reproach in this Affair. They were hardly withdrawn, when a Merchant of this City, who officiates as Agent from the Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttele came, and made the same Demand in the Name of his Prince. The Chief Burgomaster having thereupon assembled the Council at two o'Clock in the Afternoon, they sent Deputies to the Dukes Dowager, to acquaint her of the said Representation and Demand made by the Ministers of Sweden and Prussia, and the Agent of Brunswick, in the Name of their Princes. The Saxon Minister, who was at that Time with the Dukes, delivered to the Deputies a Letter, sign'd some Time ago by the King of Poland, Elector of Saxony, and directed to the Magistrates of Dantzick, importing in Substance, That in Case of the Death of Duke Ferdinand of Courland, his Polish Majesty very seriously recommended it to the Magistrates not to concern themselves, either directly or indirectly, with that Prince's Inheritance, but to refer all that should lay any Claim to it to him. The Deputies being return'd to the Council, and having made their Report of what had pass'd, a Resolution was taken to comply with the Desire of the King of Poland, and to send Word to the Ministers who had put in their Claims to the Council, that they must apply to his Polish Majesty: Which being done accordingly, by a formal Act, the Ministers sent Expresses away that Evening, to inform their Principals. The Russian Minister seem'd to give himself the least Trouble in this Affair; yet it is very certain, that on the 22d ult. (O. S.) he dispatch'd a Courier to Petersburg, and that the Saxon Minister sent away another the same Day for Dresden. From all these Circumstances it is infer'd, That the Duke dy'd on that very Day; but that they had a Mind to keep it secret till the 24th, that the Courts of Russia and Dresden might be acquainted with it first of all. The Conduct of the Magistrates of Dantzick upon this Occasion is the more approved, because they are under an indispensable Obligation to have regard to the Desire of the King of Poland. We are assur'd the late Duke of Courland has made a Will, whereby he disposes of his Estate in Favour of the Courts of Sweden and Prussia, and of the Families of Brunswick, Hesse-Homburg, and Nassau; to all which he was related: And 'tis even said that he has made the King of Prussia his Executor. He has left a great deal behind him, and his ready Cash alone, is computed at near ten Millions of Florins. The Dukes Dowager, who is by Birth Princess of Prussia, has seiz'd all his Moveables, as her own by Law. The Branch of Godard Kettler, the first Duke of Courland, being now extinct, by the Death of her Husband, and the Kings of Sweden and Prussia claiming a Right to the Succession of Courland, by virtue of Marriages between their Families and those of the former Dukes; it is for this Reason that the Residents of Sweden and Prussia (at Dantzick) have taken all the necessary Steps to shew the Validity of their Pretensions: And the Russian Resident has taken the proper Measures on his Part, because the Prince of Hesse-Homburg, General of the Russian Troops, is also one of the principal Claimants of this Succession, in Quality of Male Heir of Louisa Elizabeth of Courland, who was married to the late Landgrave of Hesse-Homburg.

As the Protestant Religion is the prevailing Religion in the Duchy of Courland, the States of the Country heartily wish, that their next Duke may be of that Religion. He who is now dead turn'd Roman Catholick in 1698.

'Tis foreseen that this Succession will meet with great Difficulties, on the Part of the Republick of Poland, which pretends, That since Godard Kettler, Grand Master of the Teutonic Order, renounced that Order in 1561, and was made a Duke by Sigismund King of Poland, this Duchy, after the Extinction of the Kettler Branch, reverts to Poland. This Pretension was confirm'd at the Dyet of Grodno in 1726, when an Act was pass'd, whereby it was determin'd, That after the Death of Duke Ferdinand, Courland should be divided into Palatinates.

There is a Report that the late Duke has, with the Czarina's Approbation, nominated a Successor by his Will who is of the Protestant Religion; But this had been more probable, if we had heard first of his own Abjuration of the Romish Religion.

Letters from Dresden say, The King and Queen of Poland had fix'd on the 9th Instant, for their Departure to Newhaus in Bohemia, to have an Interview there with the Empress Dowager Amelia, Mother to the Queen; and that the Prince Royal, and the other Princes and Princesses were to set out thither three Days before.

As the Turks and Russians, Letters from Babadaghi, by the Way of Vienna, say, The Grand Vizier has received the Grand Seignior's final Instructions for holding the Congress at Kudack, near the Borysthenes; that the three Plenipotentiaries on the Part of the Turks, are the Great Treasurer, and the two Secretaries of State; and that the Ambassadors of the Emperor, England, and Holland, are also setting out thither. The Russian Army, in the mean time, has pass'd the Borysthenes, upon which the Budziack Tartars in that Neighbourhood retired towards the Bog.

They assure us from Paris, That the Court of Spain is in Treaty with that of Vienna, to engage the Emperor to yield to his Catholick Majesty the Duchies of Parma and Placentia, for the Sum of two or three Millions of Pistoles; and that if it takes Effect, Don Philip will be put in Possession of those those two Duchies.

The Marquis de Fenelon, Ambassador of France, is return'd from Paris to the Hague. The Abbat Fitz-James is gone from thence to Rome, to visit his Father the Duke of Berwick, who is sick there.

The Chancellor of France, and M. d'Argenson, Inspector-General of Books and Printing-Presses, have made a Regulation, to which all the Booksellers in the Kingdom are to conform, for preventing the Publication of obscene and immoral Romances, and for the printing of good and useful Treatises, for the future, upon better Paper, and in a better Letter, than they are at present.

The Count Leopold, Brother to the late Count Adam de Paar, Postmaster-General of the Emperor's Hereditary Dominions, succeeds him in that Office.

Some Letters from Frankfort of the 4th Instant, O. S. say, they had just receiv'd Advice from Vienna, that the Declaration of War was to be published there forthwith against the Ottoman Porte, with the usual Formalities: And others from Cologne, which are two Days fresher, say the same was actually declar'd. They add from Frankfort, that the Marquis of Brandenburg-Anspach's eldest Son was dead of the Small-Pox.

They write from Madrid, That in the Easter Holidays, the Royal Spanish Academy, which takes every Opportunity to make its Acknowledgments to the King for its Establishment, had the Honour to present his Catholick Majesty with the 5th Tome of the Dictionary of the Castilian Language, which the King received very graciously, and all the Members had the Honour to kiss the Hands of the King, the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Asturias, &c. to whom they likewise presented a Copy. The King of Spain has not only made the Duke de Montemar Chief Secretary of War, but President of the Grand Council of War, and General in chief of all the Artillery of the Spanish Monarchy; the former of which Offices, viz. the Presidentship, was hitherto exercis'd by the King himself.

The Letters from Rome bring nothing more material, than an Account of the Pope's Consecration of the Agnus Dei's in Easter-Week, when there were as many made as took up above 15000 Pounds Weight of Wax, it being a Ceremony performed but once in 7 Years. The Reader who is curious, will find a very entertaining History of these Waxen Lambs, in the Memoirs of the Baron de POLINITZ, who was a Spectator of the Ceremony, as it was perform'd by the present Pope.

From Turin they write, that there is a prodigious Concourse of Strangers to that City, to see the precious Relick of the Sanctum Sudarium, or Holy Handkerchief, which is preserved in the Royal Chapel of the Metropolitan Church of that City, and to be expos'd to publick View next Wednesday se'nnight. In this they say is to be distinguished the very Print of our Saviour's Face; but they pretend to have the like Relick at Aix la Chapelle, Milan, Rome, at Besancon in Franche Comte, and 4 or 5 Places besides; particularly at Cadoin in Perigot: Which is much more likely to be genuine than this, tho' the most important Relick in all Turin; because the former has had the Sanction of 14 Bulls to confirm it, whereas the latter can only shew 4.
